PLANATION-SHE RECEIVED GIFTS PROM MRS. CONKLIN-QUARRELS OF THE LAWYERS.

Chicago, Dec. 26.-This was a day of sensational parently indifferent to it all, but the lawyers on orable light than that in which she appeared when | Sheehan had been a defaulter; receiving money and substantial presents of clothing, turkeys and carpet from Mrs. T. T. Conking since she became acquainted with the latter late last year.

Some letters which Mrs. Foy admitted had been written by her to W. S. Forrest, leading counsel for the defence at the first trial, showed that the "star" witness for the prosecution, as Mr. Wing cahed her, had not been actuated solely by a love of justice and a desire to undo a great wrong in remaining silent while the first trial was in progress. The best that could be said for her, judgress. The best that could be said for her, judg-ing from these compromising letters, was that she wanted her husband to stop drinking and mend his ways, and believed that Coughlin and the lawyers could bring about a change. Her letters con-tained threats of "going to see the State's Attor-of the reports published. He said: "The man who ney" unless she got some "reward for all I have has directed this attack upon me is a flar and a suffered." Her sufferings were not dwelt upon thief, and his character much when she was examined by the prosecution. Buffalo, He is now a Still, the woman's nerve and self-possession never deserted her.

After recovering from the shock and surprise incident to the quick plays made by the defence with their trump cards, Mrs. Foy turned upon Mr. reputati Wing and practically cross-examined him in regard to the conversation which took place in For-rest's office between them. The lawyer did not ex-pect to be placed in such a position, but the wit-ness at that time was in the hands of the prosecution again. The best point she made for the State was to bring out the fact, not denied by Mr. Wing, that he and Forrest told the woman to go home and give her husband a further trial or proation of six months, which she did. The attorneys for the prosecution say they are satisfied with the ending of Mrs. Foy's cross-examination, and the defendant's lawyers said the woman's story would be rendered worthless when all their impeaching testimony should have been heard.

Ex-Judge Wing to-day took up the examination of Mrs. Foy at the point where she swore to Martin Burke passing her house on the night of May 9, while she, her husband and several other persons were sitting on the front steps. For followed Burke and entered into conversation with him. The defence obtained from the willing witness the names and addresses of all the Irishmen who were sitting on the steps of the Foy house that night besides Foy himself. The defence intends to make witnesses out of any of these men who will swear contrary to Mrs. Foy's testimony.

Early in the session Mr. Wing tripped the witness, and confused her for the first time. She testi-fied last week, although not in answer to a question, that her husband and Coughlin never closed the door of the secret conference room in the Foy house after the night of the murder. This rning she said that the door was closed after her on the night of May 10, when her husband and Coughlin were talking in low tones in the front room. After May 4, she said, Foy and Cough-lin were "always talking about finding the body" when they met at her house.
"Now, I will ask you what promises have been made you by the prosecution for testifying in this case, Mrs. Foy?" said Mr. Wing. "I swear before God and man that they have romised me nothing, if I drop dead this minute."

Q.—Have you not been living with Andrew Foy as our husband since you came into this court to stify? A.—I have not seen my husband this Q.-Have you not been living with your husband within the last week? A.-Yes. In correcting herself suddenly the witness exclaimed in an excited manner: "No, no, never! You can't catch me that way."

Q.-Didn't you occupy the same sleeping apartments as your husband within the past week?
A-Yes, but he didn't come home until morning.
Q.-Why didn't you appear in court at the first trial to testify for the prosecution? A.-I was sick.

lawyer for Coughlin, and placed him in a peculiar position.

The situation became novel and complicated, and Mr. Bottum wanted Mr. Wing to take the stand at the proper time. Mrs. Foy was anxious to make the jury believe that she was actuated by love for her husband in wanting to make a deal with the State or the defence, and that his reformation was her only desire in life. "If you don't change my husband. I will make a public statement," were the words she swore she addressed to Forrest and Wing in the former's office. She swore that she told them "very near, almost the same story" she gave in court when she visital Forrest's office. "That is not true," exclaimed Wing.

"Do you expect to get a divorce, Mrs. Foy?" asked Mr. Wing, knowing what her answer would be.

"We Catholics never get divorced," she answered.

"You want to accuse him of murder and get rid of him that way?"

"It is an outrageous accusation," shouted Mr. Bottum.

"That is all Mrs. Foy," relogned Mr. Wing, and "That is all, Mrs. Foy." rejoined Mr. Wing, and the most sensational chapter in the history of the second trial of Daniel Coughlin was closed.

The money was raised by the seven bondsmen giving their notes, but John Sheehan paid the money finally. The notes were renewed once or twice, but were finally paid by Mr. Sheehan."

Mr. Matteson said Sheehan made money while in the Controller's office, but he was fond of speculating and he lost a considerable amount in pork. Among John C. Sheehan's bondsmen, besides Mr. Matteson, were the late S. F. Ekan, Michael Nellany, who is Lieutenant-Governor Sheehan's father-in-inw; M. Dell and Imniel Hanrahan.

Lieutenant-Governor Sheehan has been diplomatic to-day. Instead of consenting to talk about the charges he has sent out the following curious statement. "Lieutenant-Governor Sheehan was interviewed to-day as to what he had to say with reference to the recent attacks made upon his brother. Police Commissioner John C. Sheehan, of New-York City. He said: There is nothing much to be said. All that could justly be said was printed over ten years ago. If my brother ever cwed the city of Buffalo a dollar, it was paid by him in full years ago, and long before he took up his residence in New-York City."
